

✓

The Johns Hopkins University
Baltimore 18, Maryland

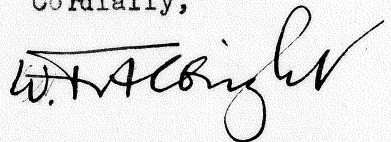

March 22nd, 1947

Dear Nelson,

Your card of the 19th has just reached me. I referred to Miss Kenyon's review in BASOR 90, pp. 17 f., n. 77a and discussed the same point in FSAC 31 (without, however, mentioning Miss Kenyon's name).

Speaking of Miss Kenyon, Wendell Phillips spent the night with us on Thursday and went up to Philadelphia with me yesterday. (He is the young Californian who has single-handed raised $200,000 in cash and equipment for the South-African Expedition of the University of California.) He saw Miss Kenyon at the Institute of Archaeology in Regent's Park, London, a week ago and found her well, but bigger around than ever. She is a first-class archaeologist, but too much disposed to regard herself as the final arbiter of everything archaeological.

Cordially,

P.S. I turned over the preliminary copy for the April BASOR to Furst on the 14th. Included in it were the two papers by Kirkbride and Yigael Sukenik, both of which had to be gone over very carefully several times before editing. I'll send you the galley proofs of both to glance over; there just isn't time to send them to Palestine, especially since the chances that they would not be delayed considerably are meager. Besides, I don't want to give young Sukenik any excuse for rewriting his paper in the galleys! Since the number will be limited to 24 pages, these two papers practically make up the number.